

1636 Sansom Street Philadelphia, PA 19103

Meet at 6:00 in our hotel lobby to join Heritage Montreal representative and this evening's speaker, Dinu Bumbaru, who will lead the short walk down Rue Sherbrooke Ouest (the "Fifth Avenue" of the city) to the Montreal apartment of Barbara Mitnick, a Victorian Society board member. The Linton (1907) was the city's grandest full-service "apartment hotel," where many of the elite had residences. Our speaker will relate the history of the era and the "Golden Square Mile" area in a short presentation to prepare us for the next day.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15 MONTREAL ARCHITECTURE

Breakfast and Dinner on your own • Lunch provided

8:45 AM

Board our bus outside the hotel for a prompt 9:00 AM departure. Our first stop will be Dorchester Square, with its grand array of late 19th- and early 20th-century buildings by Canadian, British, French and American architects. After a guided walk around the area, we will reboard the bus and proceed with stops interspersed with walks to other central areas including Place Jacques-Cartier and Place d'Armes. We will then travel by bus up Mount-Royal (for which the city was named) and walk back downhill via Des Pins and Docteur-Penfield Streets through parts of the oncegrand Square Mile residential area.

Box lunches will be provided at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

2:00 PM

In the afternoon guides from Historic Montreal will conduct a walking tour starting at the Museum and proceeding eastward, stopping at points of interest including the Erskine and American Church, the Holt-Renfrew department store, Ritz-Carlton Hotel, and the Reid-Wilson and Forget houses; the final destination of this tour will be the McGill University Campus, with its landmark buildings including the Redpath Museum and Baumgarten House/ Faculty Club.

5:00 PM

The final event of the day will be a guided tour of Shaughnessy House (1874), the central building of the internationally renowned Canadian Centre for Architecture. Afterward, you will be free to tour other areas of the institution on your own, or get a drink or dinner in the neighborhood (a list will be provided); return to the hotel on your own.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16 | OTTAWA

Breakfast and Dinner on your own • Lunch provided

7:45 AM

Board the bus outside the hotel for a prompt 8:00 AM departure.

We will be met in Ottawa by David Jeanes, President of Heritage Ottawa, who will be our guide for the first part of the day. He will accompany us around the grounds of Parliament Hill, the epicenter of the Canadian government. After an official groundbreaking in 1859, the massive and ambitious building effort (said to be the largest in the world at the time) proceeded in fits and starts, culminating in the 1870s; the central building burned in 1916 and was rebuilt in the 1920s. We will divide into two groups to be escorted through the parts of the Parliament buildings open to the public (access has been tightened due to security concerns), and then proceed outside the Parliament grounds. Our guide will take us past other government buildings and stop at the Rideau Canal for remarks.

A seated luncheon will be served at the landmark Hotel Chateau Laurier (1908-12), built for the Grand Trunk Railway (later incorporated into the Canadian National Railway). The mighty edifice stands just across the canal from Parliament Hill and was a huge hit with the public when it opened, becoming a model for other chateau-style buildings in the area and across Canada.

After lunch, we will continue on our walking tour, which will pass the ominous-looking American embassy (Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, 1999), Notre-Dame Basilica (begun 1841) and end at the National Gallery of Canada (Moshe Safdie, 1983-88). Participants will then have free time to visit the National Gallery on their own, or further explore the city.

We will leave promptly on the bus at 4:00 PM and then drive back to Montreal for an evening on our own.

Breakfast, Lunch, and Dinner on your own

We will board our bus at 9:00 AM and head toward the eastern part of the city, traditionally the home of many primarily French-speaking Montrealers.

The first stop will be Chateau Dufresne (1916-18), the grand Beaux-Arts double house and showplace of two of the city's most ambitious architects and real estate promoters, the brothers Dufresne. The interior is elegantly appointed with rooms in most every luxe style of the time, and it was furnished to match. It is also the home of the stained glass studio of Guido Nincheri. Formerly the city's museum of decorative arts, Chateau Dufresne is currently owned and operated by a local governmental entity.

In the late morning we will drive through other parts of the city, most of them ethnic middle- and working-class areas, and our guide will discuss features of the characteristic vernacular architectural styles. The Boulevard St.-Laurent roughly divided English-speaking districts to the west and French-speaking neighborhoods to the east; in between was a zone with stores, other businesses and homes primarily operated and occupied by Jewish Montrealers, with dozens of synagogues and other religious institutions to serve their needs. By special arrangement, we will visit the only survivor of these, the Bagg Street Shul, which has been continually active since 1906.

After our visit the bus will return to the hotel, after which participants will be on their own for lunch and the rest of the afternoon and evening at leisure. This will be a good time to visit sites we may have missed or that you want to revisit.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 18 | A DAY IN THE COUNTRY

Breakfast and Dinner on your own • Brunch provided

When Quebec was part of New France, it was divided into royal land-grant areas, or seigneuries. Each seigneur was literally the lord of the manor (manoir), with the right to exploit his domain as he wished. By the 19th century, the seigneurie of "La Petite Nation" had passed to the Papineau family, whose most august member was "the Great Louis Joseph," a francophone firebrand politician, bane of the British rulers. His greatest tangible legacy is the Manoir Papineau (1850, 1892), the manor house he built, expanded and remodeled. With a tower at each of the house's four corners and surrounded by landscaped grounds and outbuildings, including a granary and chapel that still survive, Papineau could survey his domain and fantasize that he was in provincial France.

Built nearby, on land sold off from the Manoir Papineau, is one of the most remarkable buildings of 20th-century Canada – the Chateau Montebello (1930), which once claimed to be the largest log building in the world – constructed in the shape of a six-pronged asterisk from over 10,000 pre-shaped logs shipped across Canada from British Columbia. Centerpiece of the Seigneury Club, a Montreal businessmen's getaway, it later became a hotel and conference center. It has hosted world leaders at international conferences and summits – and now it will host us at our Farewell Brunch. Afterward, there will be time to explore the public areas of the building and its grounds on the banks of the Ottawa River.

On the way back to the hotel in Montreal, the bus will stop at the Montreal International Airport for the convenience of those participants who have flights out that evening.
